Synopsis

This talk explores the vital role of Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) practices in transforming engineering companies to meet the demands of sustainable growth, particularly within the Malaysia context. It highlights the integration of ESG principles with key national frameworks such as the National Sustainability Reporting Framework and Bursa Malaysia's Sustainability Reporting Guidelines together with National Energy Policy (2022-2040) and Green Technology Master Plan. The sharing will delve into practical steps for aligning with our own IEM Simplified ESG Disclosure Guidelines for the Built Environment, while addressing global sustainability benchmarks like the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Participants will gain insights into how ESG implementation not only ensures regulatory compliance but also strengthens competitiveness, supporting Malaysia's ambitions for net-zero emissions by 2050 and fostering a sustainable future.
